Atlanta's Doctors and Mayors.

Dr. J. R. Hopkins of Atlanta is a welcome guest of Abbeville, who stops at the Eureka. He came to stay for only a day or two, but has been so well pleased with Abbeville that he intends to spend all his vacation with us. He speaks highly of Mayor Woodward, of Atlanta, and believes he is the best mayor the city ever had. Mayor Woodward has a weakness for the cup that brings us victorious over all the ills of life, and because of that weakness the best mayor that Atlanta ever had is the subject for the expression of mean spite by those who have not soul enough to feel another's woe, or kindness enough to hide the fault they see.

Atlanta, on occasion, puts on saintly robes, and would persecute its erring neighbors. The hypocrisy of such persecution is plainly seen in making no effort to bring her accusers to justice. Atlanta's erring women can do no wrong, except by the aid of some of her persecutors.

As Atlanta doesn't hire, or elect, a mayor to preach, but to look after the interests of the city, this editor hopes that Woodward's persecutors may not prevail in their efforts. As a rule, the cold-blooded skink that does not get drunk. He is too stingy or too mean to buy the fluid that gives it color in the cup. It is, however, exceedingly naughty for a man to get drunk, but whoever knew a drunkard that was not originally a whole-souled good fellow?

600 Tons of Cotton Seed Sold.

The Oil Mill at Elberton, through its representative Mr. Wyche bought about six hundred tons of cotton seed in Abbeville yesterday at $20 per ton or 90 cents per bushel. The parties selling were: McGill & Brown 300 tons, Calvert & Nickles 100 tons, W. H. Long 100 tons and R. A. Richey 80 tons a total of 580 tons.

It is said that these seeds were offered to the local Oil Mill, and Mr. Harden favored buying them but it was not thought wise by the managing board.

Without knowing anything of the wisdom of buying or not buying these seeds it looks like if the Elberton Mill could buy them and pay freight and handling, there should have been a profit to the local mill to take them less the freight. It may be that the general offices are in better position to dispose of the product to advantage, but in the purchase of the raw material it seems that it would be the part of wisdom to defer to the judgment of the home man. Especially is this true when the home man happens to be a man of good judgment and the strictest integrity as is the case here at Abbeville.

It may be said that this is no business of ours, and this is true, except as the Press and Banner is and always has been a well wisher of the local institution.

The national democratic and republican platforms stand for much in common. Republicans stand for revision of the tariff while democrats stand for revision and reduction of tariff rates. On the currency question both parties are at sea, and time alone will involve a real solution. A leading republican paper actually mistook a part of the republican platform for a part of one of Mr. Bryan's speeches and wrote a very general article criticizing the supposed speech. When party distinctions are so faintly drawn, the ordinary citizen need not fear greatly the public policy.

Aside from the national issues involved, there is one good reason for the triumph of democracy. The long tenure of office by one party, and hence by the office holders of that party, tends to a state of laxness and corruption. Party leaders become arrogant and careless of the public trust and so public expenditures grow. The bounds of economic appropriations are over run, and wasteful extravagance obtains instead.

A little reason of Democracy, just an interregnum as it were, would purify and improve the situation. While this is idle talk, now that the people have spoken, there is left one consolation: We have scared them badly, and they will for a little while have to be on their good behavior.

The only thing that prevented Bryan's election was the lack of votes. If he had received more votes than Taft received he would have been elected.

LOWNESVILLE.

Some one of the "light fingered gentry," broke into John Reid's house last night was a week ago, while John was attending to his religious duties, and took therefrom several dollars in money, and a bank certificate for about twenty-five dollars. A rogue must be hard run indeed, for the lawless party, as it did throughout the United States last Tuesday, while the weather conditions were such as ought to have brought out a full vote, yet judging from the small vote polled here it seems as if four people to the one who fully alive the issues in money, and do not fully realize the value of this privilege. The few federal registration boys who had been to the election were a very quiet, one, not a single one, in fact, was seen to interrupt the quiet feeling of our people. The few federal voters were not used and the Independent and Socialist tickets were not seen.

Mrs. J. W. Parker of Augusta, spent several days last week in the family of her sister Mrs. J. E. Lister.

Mr. W. E. Ellis in charge of the County Road force came up this morning and the bridge across Rocky River near the iron bridge which was damaged by the late rise in the river. It is to be hoped that it will hold its own in another shower.

Mr. John Taylor, principal of the school in this place, in response to a telephone message calling him to see his sick mother, left Friday evening for the home of his father Rev. E. F. Taylor.

Electrical Mr. Bruce Moseley of Greenwood came up yesterday to spend a day or two with the family of his father Dr. J. B. Moseley.

Thursday and Friday morning there was frost enough in places to kill a considerable part of vegetation there was not enough to make it a killing frost.

Mr. M. H. Hall whose home is at Pendleton is canvassing here for the ticks in several places where he found he has given every possible assistance to the owners of the ticks in spraying them with the necessary oil and giving the owners such instructions as are needed for the future.

Mr. J. A. Hawthorn and his daughter Miss Annie, of Lattimer, were here yesterday with friends and relatives of Penney's Creek a few miles from here and who left here some years ago for South Georgia to visit to his old home a short time ago and is still here.

Quite a number of the people in this section have nearly finished gathering their crops.

Death of Col. M. T. Wardlaw.

Hiram Tillman Wardlaw was found dead in his bed, Thursday morning November 5, 1908, aged 55 years.

The last seen of him alive was on Tuesday night. The door of his room was locked all day Wednesday, and no answer came from any knock. A curious caller after knocking peeped through the key hole that day. Seeing, as he thought, Mr. Wardlaw lying in bed asleep, and not caring to wake him, made no further effort to see him at that time.

The same caller went to see him on Thursday morning when, seeing as he saw before the funeral of Mr. Wardlaw in bed, in the same position, suspicion was aroused when others were notified and the door was opened. The form of the deceased was found in bed. It seems that he died without a struggle, and all the evidence pointed to the belief that he died Tuesday night, and that he had then been dead for some thirty-six hours.

Mr. McMill, undertaker, was summoned. The body was prepared for burial, after which the remains were taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. Edwin Calhoun of this city. At ten o'clock on Friday morning, friends assembled at the home of Mr. Calhoun for funeral services which were conducted by his pastor, the Rev. Dr. J. Lowrie Wilson, and the Mr. Watkins, the Baptist minister. After which carriages and other vehicles conveyed a number of friends to Long Creek cemetery to witness the last ceremonies over their departed friend.

The grave was covered by many flowers, the gifts of sympathetic women.

The pall bearers were: J. L. Perrin, W. S. Colbran, C. J. Lyon, M. E. Hollingsworth, P. A. Roche, and Richard Sondley.

Mr. Wardlaw had been a well known figure on our streets for many years, and his uniform courtesy to all, made, for him many friends. He was an interesting talker, and was quick at repartee, which repartee was always in a kindly spirit. While he was agreeable and sociable with all, his nature led him to love the companionship of educated men. He was a reader of the daily press, and kept in touch with current events. He took great interest in the presidential election, but he had little faith in Bryan's election. And strange it is that his last act was as manager of the election.

At the conclusion of that labor let us hope that he lay down to pleasant dreams in that sleep which knows no waking.

Mr. Wardlaw was a member of the distinguished Abbeville family by that name, being a son of W. A. Wardlaw, who was at the time of his death in 1876, a commission merchant in Charleston. In point of natural ability Mr. Wardlaw was the equal of any of them.

At one time he was owner of an interest in the Abbeville Press and Banner. He withdrew from the paper some twenty years ago. As a magistrate at Abbeville his administration of the law was fearless and just. His judgments were remarkably clear and discriminating.

Mr. Wardlaw lived in peace with all men, kind, cherishing malice toward no man, but rejoiced at any good fortune that might come to any one. He spoke kindly of his fellow men, and judged those with faults in tenderness or sympathy more than in censure.

Mr. Wardlaw had no fears of the hereafter and he no doubt died as he would have chosen to die—peacefully.

Mr. Wardlaw was a life member of one of the Masonic lodges in Charleston, and for many years after his return to Abbeville he attended the meetings of Clinton Lodge.

Mr. Wardlaw did not know the value of a dollar. Until his patrimony was gone he never realized that there is no friend so true as a dollar or two. When he had money he shared it with his friends, and when he was old he often felt the need of the money which he had generously expended in his youth.

But to the last he had friends who were true and kind to him. He never married, and like all men who remain single, he needed the tender solace of a family.

How he was killed, is matter of little consequence. He is dead, and underlying his death is a lesson that newspaper men must not tolerate insult from a newspaper any more than from an individual.

Senator Carmack was defeated for United States Senator by Governor Ben Taylor, and we have no hesitancy in saying that he would have made a better Senator than Gov. Taylor can ever make. He was defeated for Governor by Gov. Patterson, and with all due regard for Gov. Patterson's fitness for the place, as was exemplified in putting down the night rider in his State, Senator Carmack would have made as good a Governor. He was in fact one of the great men of the nation; a man of great powers of logic and polite invecitive. He was perhaps dreaded in debate by Republican Senators more than any man, with the possible exception of Senator Tillman, on the Democratic side of the Senate.

He used the epithet where Tillman like Richard used his good broadsword. ### Ex-Senator Carmack Slain.

As a result of a street fight on 7th Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., Ex-United States Senator, Edward Ward Carmack is dead, and is slightly wounded.

The difficulty grew out of some editorial appearing in the Nashville Tennessean, a paper of which Senator Carmack has recently been made editor, in which Col. Dubson B. Cooper, a prominent party leader, was severely criticised. Col. Cooper was a friend to Gov. Patterson in his recent race for Governor of Tennessee against Senator Carmack.

Col. Cooper's friends claim that at the time the parties met, he and his son were leaving the Governor's office by a circuitous route to avoid a meeting with Senator Carmack. This they said they were doing at the advice of the Governor and other friends. An eye witness, a lady to whom Mr. Carmack had just spoken, says that as the elder Cooper and his son advanced toward Senator Carmack she heard him say: "We've got you all right" or something to that effect. Sen. Carmack reached for his pistol, when the same voice said: "You coward, you are hitting negroes and women." She says that Mr. Carmack instantly jumped aside so as to get clear of her and in another instant he fell all in a heap. She thinks that Robert Cooper fired the first shot. Col. Cooper, Robin Cooper's father, did not shoot though he stood ready, pistol in hand.

How he was killed, is matter of little consequence. He is dead, and underlying his death is a lesson that newspaper men must not tolerate insult from a newspaper any more than from an individual.

After Car Breakers

SHERIFF LYON OF ABBEVILLE IN THE CITY.

He is After a Gang of Negroes Who Have Been Stealing from Freight Cars.

Anderson Daily Mail. Sheriff C. J. Lyon of Abbeville arrived in the city yesterday afternoon in search of three negroes, who are charged in connection with several other crimes, now in the Abbeville jail, with car breaking. One of the negroes, Marcus Williams, was arrested last night by local officers and is now in jail here. He secured a lawyer this morning and asked for bond before Judge B. F. Wilson. It was fixed at $500 and the negro was returned to jail. Sheriff Lyon expects to land the other two negroes this afternoon.

One of the negroes in jail at Abbeville charged with being one of the band of car breakers, is George Quarles, an Anderson negro. The sheriff says these negroes have been operating at several places and that there is a kind of band of them. They steal and ship the loot to one another, passing the clubs being conducted in some instances as a blind to the real work being carried on.

The last of the offenses and that which brought Sheriff Lyon here, was committed at Abbeville only a few days ago. A car was broken open and 16 $5 Stinson hats and a dozen pair of ladies shoes taken. He has traced this crime to the three negroes he is after here, and thinks, too, they may be able to tell him something about the other car breakings that have been going on for some time.
